The First Cloud.

"It was to meet such difficulties as this that tontines—" "Brother!" I wrote the first sitting at my desk, and said the last aloud, impatiently—well there, angrily—for Mattie had bounced into the room, run to the back of my chair, and clapped her hands over my eyes, exclaiming,—

"Oh, Dick, what a shame! And you promised to come up and dress!"

"I do wish you would not be so childish!" I cried, snatching away her hands. "There's a blot you've made on my manuscript."

"Don't be cross, sir!" she said laughing, as she gave a waltz around the room, making her pretty silk dress whisk over one of the chairs, which she merrily picked up, and then, coming to my writing table, she took a rose out of a basket of flowers and began to arrange it in her hair.

"I'm not cross," I said coldly, "but engaged in a serious work of a mercantile and monetary nature. You seem to think men ought always to be butterflies."

"No, I don't Dick dear," she cried. "There, will that do?"

She held her head on one side for me to see the creamy rose nestling in her crisp dark hair; but after a glance at it I let my eyes fall upon my desk, and went on writing my pamphlet. I saw that she was looking wistfully at me, but I paid no heed and then she came and rested her hands upon my shoulder.

"Are you going to be cross with me, Dick?" she said softly.

"Cross? No!" I jerked out impatiently. "Only I thought I had married a woman, and she has turned out to be a child."

There was silence then for a few minutes, broken only by the scratching of my pen. The little hands twitched a little as they lay upon my shoulder, and I nearly wrote down, instead of "The calculations arrived at by the projectors of tontines." "Richard Marlow, how can you be such a disagreeable wretch? But of course I did not write it—only thought it—and I felt wonderfully disposed to turn around, snatch the little figure to my breast, and kiss away the tears which I knew were gathering in her eyes.

Somehow or other, though, I did not do it—only went on glumly writing—for I was cross, worried and annoyed. I had set myself a task that necessitated constant application, and I was not getting on as I could wish: so, like many more weak minded individuals of the male sex, instead of asking for the comforts and advice of wife, I visited my disappointment upon the first weak object at hand, and that object was the lady in question.

"Please, Dick dear, don't be angry with me. I can't help feeling very young and girlish, though I am your wife. I do try, oh, so hard, to be womanly: but, Dick, I am only eighteen and a half."

"Thirteen and a half, I should say," I said scornfully, just as if some sour spirit were urging me to say biting, sarcastic things, that I knew would pain the poor girl; but for the life of me I could not help it.

There was no answer—only a little sigh—and the hands were withdrwan.

I went on writing—rubbish that I knew I should have to cancel.

"Had you not better get ready, Dick!" said Mattie, softly. "You said you would come, when I went upstairs, and the Wilson's won't like it if we are late."

"Hang the Wilson's!" I growled.

There was another pause, filled up by the scratch, scratch of one of the noisiest pens I ever used, and another little sigh.

Mattie was standing close behind me, but I did not look around, and at last she glided gently to a chair and sat down.

"What are you going to do?" I said roughly.

"Wait for you, Dick dear," she replied.

"You need not wait. Go on, I shan't come. Say I've a headache—say anything!"

"Dick are you ill?" she said tenderly, as she came behind me once more and rested her hand on my shoulder.

"Yes—no—pray don't bother. Go on. Perhaps I'll come and fetch you."

There was another pause.

"Dick dear, I'd rather not go without you," she said meekly.

"And I'd rather you did go without me," I said angrily. "The Wilsons are our best friends, and I won't have them slighted."

"Then why not come, Dick?" said the little woman, and I could see that she was struggling brave to keep back the tears.

"Because I've no time for such frivolity. There, you've wasted enough of my time, so go."

Scratch, scratch, went the exasperating pen, as I went on writing more stuff to cancel, and yet too weak and angry to leave off like a sensible man run up and change my things, and accompany my little wife to the pleasant social gathering a few doors lower down the road.

She had been looking forward to the visit as a treat. So had I till that gloomy fit came over me; but as I had taken the step already made, I felt that I could not retreat without looking foolish; so I acted with the usual wisdom displayed by man under such circumstances, and made matters much worse.

"Did you hear me say that I wished you to go alone?" I said angrily.

"Yes, yes, Dick dear, I'll go if you wish," Mattie said very meekly; "but indeed I'd far rather stay at home."

"You are desired to go; you have a rose in your hair," I said sarcastically—oh, what a poor satire when it was put there to please me!—"and they expect you; so now go, and enjoy yourself," I added, by way of a sting to my sensible speech.

"I can't enjoy myself, Dick," she said gently, "unless you come too. Let me stay."

"I desire you to go!" I exclaimed, banging my hand down on the desk.

She looked at me with the great tears standing in her eyes, and then, coming nearer, she bent over and kissed my forehead.

"Will you come and fetch me, Dick?" she said softly.

"Yes—no—perhaps—I don't know," I said roughly, as I repelled her caresses. And then, looking wistfully at me, she went slowly to the door, glided out, and was gone.

That broke the spell, and I started from my seat, more angry than ever, I was wroth with her now for obeying me so meekly, and I gently opened the door, to hear her call the maid to accompany her as far as the Wilsons'. Then I heard them go—heard the girl return, and I was alone.

Alone? Well, not exactly; for so to speak, I was having an interview with my angry self, asking how I could let a feeling of annoyance act upon my better nature, and make me behave as I had to the sweet girlish being who during the six months we had been married, had never looked at me but with eyes of love.

"Change your things and go after her," something seemed to say; but I repelled it, threw my writing aside kicked off my boots, snatched my slippers out of the closet, thrust the easy chair in front of the fire, threw myself into it, and then, with my feet on the fender and my hands in my pockets, I sat, morose, bitter and uncomfortable gazing at the glowing embers.

"She had no business to go!" I exclaimed. "She knew I was up all last night writing that miserable book, and, was out of sorts, and she ought to have stayed."

Then I reviewed the past half hour, and grew calmer as I leaned back, knowinn as I did that I had forced her to go, poor child, and how miserable she would be.

"She'll forget it among all those people," I said bitterly.

But I did not believe it, and at last I sat there calling myself idiot, blind, madman, to plant as I had the first seeds of what might grow into a very apas tree of dissension, and blight the whole of our maried life.

"Poor little darling!" I said at last; "I'll wait up till she comes home, and then tell her how sorry I am for my folly, and ask her forgiveness. But as a man can I do that! Will it not be weak? Never mind," I exclaimed, "I'll do it! Surely there can be no braver thing than to own one's self in the wrong. Life is short to blurr it with petty quarrels. And suppose she were taken ill to-night—my darling whom I love with all my heart? Or suppose she went too near the fire and her dress caught alight? There, how absurd! Thank goodness, she is in silk, and not in one of those fly-away muslins!"

I sat on, musing, till suddenly there was a buzz outside the house, and then the rush of feet, I fancied I heard the word "fire!" repeated again and again, and, turning to the window, there was a glow which lighted up the whole place.

I dashed down the stairs and out of the door, to find the road thronged, for a house a little lower down was in flames, and to my horror I had not taken a dozen steps before I found it was our friend's the Wilson'.

There was no engine, but a crowd of excited people talked eagerly; and just then the fire escape came trundling along the road It was quite time, for the house as I reached it was blazing furiously, the flames darting out in long fiery tongues from the upper windows, while at several there were people crying piteously for help.

I fought my way through the crowd, and tried to run up to the house, but half a dozen officious people held me back, while the men with the fire escape hurried to rear it against the house; but it would not reach because of the garden in front, so that they had to get the wheels of the escape over the iron railings, and this caused great delay.

"Let me go!" I panted to those who held me. "Let me go! Some one—some one is in the house!"

"You can't do any good, sir," said a policeman, roughly. "The escape men will do all that can be done."

But I struggled frantically, and got loose, feeling all the while a horrible, despairing sensation, as I knew that my poor darling was one of the shrieking suppliants for help at the windows, and that but for my folly I might have saved her.

As I freed myself from those who held me, and ran to the escape, it was to find that the man who had ascended it had just been beaten back by the flames.

"It's no good," he said; "we must try the back of the house."

He was a bout to drag the machine away, when I heard my name called in piteous tones; and as I was once more seized, I shook myself free, rushed up the ladder, with the flames scorching and burning my face, and panting and breathless, I reached a window where Mattie stood stretching out her hands.

I got astride of the sill, the flames being wafted away from me, and threw my arms around her; but as I did so the ladder gave away, burned through by the flames that gushed furiously from the lower window, and I felt that I must either jump or try to descend by the staircase.

There was no time for thinking, so I climbed in, lifted Mattie in my arms, feeling her dress crumble in my hands as I touched her, and the horrible odor of burnt hair rose to my nostrils as I saw her wild, blackened face turned to mine.

"Dick, Dick!" she gasped, "save me!" and then she fainted.

Fortunately, I was as much at home in the house as in my own, and making for the staircase through the flame and smoke, I reached it in safety, but below me was what seemed to be a fiercely blazing furnace. I recoiled for a moment, but it was my only hope, and I recalled that the lower floor was as yet untouched by the fire; it was the one beneath me that was blazing so furiously. So, getting a good tight grip of my treasure, I rushed down the burning stairs, feeling them crackle and give way as I bounded from one to the other.

It was a fiery ordeal, but in a few seconds I was below the flames, and reached the hall, where I struggled to the door, reached it and fell. If I could but open it I knew we were saved; but I was exhausted, and the hot air caught me by the throat and seemed to strangle me. I raised my hand to the lock, but it fell back. I beat feebly at the door but there was only the roar of flames to answer me: and as I made one more supreme effort, panting and struggling to reach the fastening, I was dragged back by the weight of the burden I still clasped to my breast.

It was more than human endurance could bear, and I felt that the end was near; and to make my sufferings more poignant, Mattie seemed to revive, struggling with me for her life, as she kept repeating my name, and clung to me, till—

"Dick—dear Dick! Wake—pray pray wake! Are you ill?"

I started up, to find Mattie clinging to me; and, clasping her to my heart a great sob burst from me as I kissed her passionately again and again, hardly able to believe my senses.

"Oh, Dick," she panted, "you did frighten me so! I couldn't stay to supper at the Wilsons, dear, for I could do nothing but think about your being here alone, and cross with me. So—so I was so miserable, Dick, that I slipped away and came home, to find you lying back here, panting and struggling: you wouldn't wake when I shook you. Were you ill?"

"Oh, no, not at all," I said, as I kissed her again and again, feeling now for the first time sensible of a smarting pain in one foot.

"You have burnt yourself too, Dick; look at your foot."

It was quite true; the toe of one slipper must have come in contact with the fire; and it was burned completely off.

"But, dear Dick," she whispered, nestling closer to me, "are you very angry with your little wife for being such a girl?"

I could not answer, only thank God that my weak fit of folly was past, as I clasped her closer and closer yet.

"Mattie, I said at last in a very husky voice, "can you forgive me for being so weak?"

I could say no more, for the hindrance of two soft lips placed on mine; and while they rested there I made a vow I hope I shall have strength to keep; for real troubles are so plenty it is folly to invent the false.

At last, when I was free, I took the rose out of her hair and placed it in my pocket-book; while, in answer to the inquiring eyes that were bent on mine, I merely said,—

"For a memento of a dreadful dream."

By the way, I never finished that pamphlet.

Washington's Quarrel With Payne.

'It was in that era,' said Mr. Brocket, the white whiskered auditor of Alexandria, 'in which Washington had his quarrel with Lieutenant Payne. We were standing at a window on the second floor of the market house and looking down into the great open court which it surrounds. The court is filled with hundreds of little wooden booths, where the farmers bring their produce and display it for sale on every market day. The meat stalls are in the building itself, but the whole is of comparitively recent date, and in Washington's time the place was an open market space.

'The cause of the trouble,' continued Mr. Brocket, 'was political. There was a contest for the Virginia Assembly, and Payne held one political theory, while Washington held another. Payne was himself a candidate for the Legislature against Fairfax, of Alexandria. Washington supported Fairfax, and when he met Payne he had a hot political discussion with him on the spot which you see just below you. Payne considered himself insulted by one of Washington's remarks and knocked him down. The moment the assault was over the story went like lightning through the town that Colonel Washington was killed, and his troops, who were stationed with him at Alexandria at the time, rushed in. They would have made short work with Payne if Washington had not prevented them, and, pointing to his black eye, told them that it was his affair and he knew how to manage it. They thought this meant a duel, and the next day the town was on the qui vive in regard to the affair. The following morning Payne got a note from Washington asking him to come to the hotel. Payne, expecting a duel, did so, but he found Washington with his head tied up, in an amicable mood. He said as Payne entered, and I doubt not he had his words cut and dried before hand: 'Mr. Payne, to err is human. I was wrong yesterday, but if you have had sufficient satisfaction let us be friends.' There was a decanter of wine and two glasses on the table, which Washington had ordered to smooth over the trouble. The two pledged themselves to new friendship over this, and history relates that they remained strong friends to the day of Washington's death. Colonel Payne was one of the pall-bearers at Washington's funeral."—Cleveland Ledger.

Looking Out for the Cars.

"All women are alike in the fear of the cars," said an Illinois Central conductor. "They carry their caution to absurd extremes. That reminds me of a little story. Down in the southern part of the State we have up at road crossings some of the old-fashioned signs, 'Look out for the cars when the bell rings.' At one of the crossings the other day two women came up, driving an old horse hitched to a buggy. They looked all about and couldn't see any cars, but happened to read the sign. 'Stop,' said one, 'I hear a bell.' They both listened, and sure enough they heard a bell tinkling. One of the women got out, and amid considerable excitement took hold of the horse's bridle. The other tightened her grip on the lines, set her jaws, and prepared for the worst. They looked anxiously up the track for the train, but still couldn't see it, though they could hear the bell a little plainer than before. They waited and waited. Five minutes passed, then ten, and still no train. The old horse went to sleep, while the women's nerves, from long straining, threatened to throw them into hysterics. Nearer and nearer came the bell against which the sign warned them, and so they stood still. In about a quarter of an hour an old brindle cow came walking down the pasture by the side of the track, chewing her cud and monotonously jingling her bell. One of the women cried from nervousness, and the other one got mad at the railroad company, and said they were nothing but mean old monopolies, anyway."

The Lime-Kiln Club.

President Gardner in Trouble About the Cooking Stove.

As the hour for opening the meeting arrived and the triangle sounded its warning notes Sir Isaac Walpole ascended to the President's desk and said:

"Gem'len, it am my painful dooty to riz up heah an' inform you dat Brudder Gardner will not be present dis evenin' fur de furst time since Paradise Hall was opened to de club. Yesterday was de day fixed upon by him an' de ole woman for settin' up de coal stove. Dey sot out in de bes' of speerits, nebber dreamin'ob de dark shadder which hovered o'er dat cabin roof, an' ripped off de shingles wid its bloody claws."

At this point the excitement and confusion in the hall became so great that Giveadam Jones had to slam Elder Toots into the wood-box and throw Humble Smith over three benches before order was restored.

"Our beloved President hab sprained his back and busted his suspenders," continued Sir Isaac, "but was still full ob feelin' dat he would conker or die, when, at a critical minit, de ole woman's strength gin out an' de full weight ob a stove weighin' about six tons fell upon Brudder Gardner. When de nayburs got him out from under dat mass of iron he was speechless an' sanguine, an' it was nigh upon an hour befo' he came too an' axed to see his dog. Seben doctors hev surrounded de cabin eber since, an' our President has so fur recovered dat he kin tell de difference between chopped cabbage an clam chowder. His orders am fur me to occupy de cheer an' do de bes' I kin under de circumstances."

RESOLVED.

Waydown Beedee offered the following resolution:

"Resolved, Dat we sympathize wid our beloved President to de fullest extent ob de law, and dat his absence tonight am deemed an irreparable loss to de entire nashun."

The resolution was unanimously adopted, and while the vote was being taken many of the members were seen to shed tears.—Detroit Free Press.

Rapid Growth of a Cent.

A cent seems of little value, remarks an exchange, but if it is doubled a few times, it grows to a marvelous sum. A young lady in Portland caught her father in a very rash promise, by a knowledge of this fact on her part.

She modestly proposed that if her father would give her only one cent on one day, and double the amount on each successive day for just one month, she would pledge herself never to ask of him another cent of money as long as she lived. Paterfamilias, not stopping to run over the figures in his head, and not supposing it would amount to a large sum, was glad to accept the offer at once, thinking it also a favorable opportunity to include a possible marriage dowry in the future. On the twenty-fifth day he became greatly alarmed, lest if he complied with his own acceptance he might be obliged to be "declared a bankrupt on his own petition."

But on the thirtieth day the young girl demanded only the pretty little sum of $5,368,709,12! The astonished merchant was only too happy to cancel the claim by advancing a handsome cash payment for his folly in allowing himself to give a bond—for his word he considered as good as his bond—without noticing the consideration therein expressed, and by promising to return to the old custom of advancing smaller sums daily until otherwise ordered.

Our arithmetical reporter has been "figuring on it," and says that if the old gentleman had fulfilled his promise, the daughter would have had, upon the receipt of the thirtieth payment, the snug little sum of $10,430,617,43.

She Shamed the Burglar.

One night lately, at the Home of the Merciful Saviour for Crippled Children, in Philadelphia, between the hours of 1 and 2, Sister Sarah was aroused by hearing a chair fall over below stairs. Hastily putting on her wrapper, lamp in hand, she descended to the parlor. Her first glance revealed an open window at the back part of the room. A small part of this parlor is curtained off. The curtain was parted, and Sister Sarah thought it moved. Approaching it, she found herself face to face with a white man, tall and stout. Fixing her eyes upon him she said: "The Chinese have a saying that to some men hearts have been given, and to some a gizzard instead of a heart." And with a look of scorn she continued: "You have come to a house as a thief where there are only crippled children and a few women to take care of them." The man drew his hat over his eyes and leaped out of the window.

Among the Egyptians the cat was held sacred to Isis, or the moon, and worshipped with great ceremony. In the mythology of all the Indo-Europeans nations the cat holds a prominent place, and its connection with witches is well known.

William M. Evart has been elected U. S. senator from New York.

IN the list of Legislative committees, appointed in both houses last week, the names of the representatives from this county, Rhone and Woodward, appear on the agricultural committee.

AT the meeting of the democratic state committee at Harrisburg last week, W. U. Hensel, editor of the Lancaster Intelligencer, was re-elected chairman of the committee and also the members of said committee were re-elected.

MR. Larmont, private secretary to president-elect Cleveland, says, the report that office seekers greatly annoy Mr. Cleveland is false. Against all expectations the democrats, for all they were out in the cold so long, act very modest and do not intrude on Mr. Cleveland's time at all.

The famous Tammany organiztion in New York seems to be doomed to go out of existence. Some of their best and most influential members figured on the list of the county democracy in the late primary elections. If Tammany would die it would be a great advantage to New York's democracy.

A Threatening Speech.

When the news of the London dynamite explosion reached Washington it was the theme of conversation everywhere. The tenor of the conversation was merely one of interest except when the women and children were referred to. Everybody condemned that, while the destruction of property was only viewed with indifference.

The State Department, having closer relations with foreign powers than any other, was apparently all torn up in its mind over the explosions. There are many Englishmen among the attaches of that arm of the public service and those who are not English have English manners and profess a deep sympathy for English institutions. These attaches were thrown into a genuine panic and the "blawsted Irish" came in for no end of execration at their hands. The leading officials at once laid their heads together and made a rough draft or a bill, making the manufacture of dynamite for other than business purposes a penal offense, and sent the instrument post haste to the Capital and placed it in the hands of Senator Edmunds, who introduced it in the Senate the moment the opportunity was offered. The haste with which this was accomplished and the body in which the bill was introduced caused some amusement, as the Senate is blamed with having a strong affinity for the House of Lords. A citizen of Washington, who is known to be an extreme Socialist and who is a member of the Society of Social Democrats, said this evening that Senate and the United States Government would do well to keep their hands out of this dynamite business, both now and in the future.

"There is no proof as yet that these dynamite outrages, as they are called, are conceived in Am rica," said the Anarchist, "and until there is the government will merely provoke a very large element of our citizenship by taking such steps as are proposed in the bill introduced by Mr. Edmunds. We mean war upon all oppression, and whenever the United States Government institutes a system of repression then the war will extend from the monarchies of the Old World to the Capital city of the New. Let that aristocratic body known as the Senate and that title-worshipping, exclusive body of officials who head the State Department have care for themselves. No power can prevent the manufacture of dynamite for one purpose any more than for another, and it is far easier to deposit it within the Capitol, or the State Department, or the White House, than to successfully spirit it through the line of police which guards every entrance to the Parliament House, or through the walls and guarded gates of the old Tower of London, within which the earth is rich with the blood of men, women and children who were executed and assassinated by the ancestors of the landed nobility who now have their feet upon the necks of Ireland. I tell you for publication in your journal and as a warning to the government, that the spirit of repression will be promptly met by the spirit of aggression and that this time, when hundreds of thousands of honest working men and their families are at the point of starvation, is not a good nor a safe time to show sympathy for a luxurious nobility who grind their wealth from the poor of Great Britain and Ireland."

Schuyler Colfax left an estate valued at $550,000. The family mansion at South Bend, together with half the residue, falls to the widow and the rest to Schuyler Colfax, Jr.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 28, 1884.

It is not often that I have had a good word to say in commendation of the public officials under the present administration, but some of the members of the grand old party who find themselves unable to use Major Clark to carry out some of their political deviltry, having already commenced war on the Commissioner of Pensions, I want to say that a more conscientious public official than Major Clarke does not exist. For the first time in the history of the Pension office the work of that bureau is being done intelligently, accurately and to the eminent satisfaction of the whole public. Major Clarke has worked himself up against the jealousies of his competitors for place, from a simple clerkship to the head of this important bureau, and the more his administration of the duties of the office is attacked by these chronic place-hunters who have all failed to make use of him, the more likely will he find favor not only with the general public but with those who will insist against any change in the official head of the bureau under a new administration.

An astute newspaper correspondent here mentions the name of Capt. John Erieson for Mr. Cleveland's Secretary of the Navy. This looks like putting young blood into the new administration, indeed. Captain Erieson is now eighty-one years old, but nevertheless probably as vigorous as many a Cabinet officer of modern days. I have always thought somehow that this country has never appreciated the great service that Capt. Erieson has performed for us, nor have we shown ourselves grateful to him for the personal sacrifice he made for us in building and fitting out that gallant little cheese-box that revolutionized the world's ideas of maritime warfare, when she knocked out the huge "Merimac" in about the first round. Had the people had the opportunity on that March morning in 1862 they would have showered such honors upon Erieson as no mortal had ever received, for he had demonstrated the fact that we were invincible against any foe upon the water with the Monitor, and the army at the West had shown itself abundantly able to take care of itself on land. Capt. Erieson has been at work in all these years, since the war closed, in perfecting other maritime engines of destruction, the last of which is the "Destroyer" from which five hundred pounds of dynamite in one mass can be thrown under water with the most accurate aim, and with perfect safety to the vessel from which it is hurled. For coast defence it is as perfect a means as human ingenuity can devise, and would be irresistible against the attacks of the combined navies of Europe. There is no humbug about this, and because there is not it is not at all likely that Congress will look upon the scheme to aid Capt. Eireson in building his vessels, with any sort of complacency. PHONO.

DYNAMITERS' WORK.

Both Houses of Parliament and the Tower of London Shattered.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The most daring and disastrous attempt on the public safety yet made by the dynamiters, occurred yesterday afternoon. Three infernal machines at least, and perhaps four, were exploded—one in the house of parliament, one or two in Westminster hall, which adjoins them, and one in the tower of London, four miles away down the Thames. The explosions were evidently designed to be simultaneous. They actually occurred within a few minutes of each other, at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Saturday, when there is no session of parliament, is the usual visiting day at the house of parliament. As a rule there is no crowd of visitors. There were more yesterday than usually come and the attendants recall that the number of women were unusually large, and that many of the women carried parcels upon which they seemed to bestow uncommon care. The suspicion has arisen that the seeming women were men in women's clothes, seeking an opportunity to dispose infernal machines and leave them to be fired by time fuses.

A large quantity of explosive matter had been placed inside the great ornamental gates leading to the crypt under Westminster Hall. These gates were blown off their hinges and thrown to the ground. All the windows on the north and south sides of the immense building were blown to atoms. The concussion shook down from the grand oak roof of the hall accumulated soot of centuries. This in its downward movement made such a dense cloud that the officers on guard became alarmed and dared not enter the room. In the lobby the splinters were for a time as thick as flakes in a blinding snow storm. They were propelled in many cases with dangerous force. They cut and ripped the leather from the seats and tore out and scattered the horse hair stuffings all over the house.

Three minutes had hardly passed when another explosion occurred completely demolishing the lobby of the house of commons in the parlament buildings adjoining and opening into Westminster Hall. Here the dynamite must have been disposed under the peers' gallery, back of the speaker's chair and to the left of it.

The explosion of the Tower of London occurred at exactly 2 p. m. According to the earlier reports it was the most successful which has yet been made upon any of the public buildings since the inauguration of the present era of dynamite warfare. The famous old building was crowded with visitors at the time of the explosion.

A large number of children were among the visitors. Many of these little ones had their faces and hands very badly torn by the broken glass and flying splinters. The most piteous sight in the large crowd of innocent persons temporarily detained within the tower walls was afforded by these little ones with their pale faces and bleeding heads.

The number of those injured by the explosions is as follows: At the tower, six injured seriously and fourteen slightly; at the parliament buildings, four seriously and ten slightly. Over a hundred visitors were in the house of commons when the explosion occurred in Westminster Hall. Most of them rushed out of the building to ascertain the cause of the report, and thus many lives were saved. The tower was fairly filled with visitors.

The city is in a frenzied state of excitement. The whole of the police force is on duty, and the troops in and around the city are under arms. Police patrols are stationed everywhere in close proximity to each other, and a cordon of police has been drawn around every public building.

Miscellaneous News.

A general cut-down in wages was agreed upon by mills in Lawrence, Lowell and Manchester, Mass., on the 15th, and will take effect this month. Nearly all the mills at Lawrence, including the Pacific, are in the agreement.

Entombed in Snow.

Terrible Devastation and Death Caused by the Avalanches in Italy.

ROME, January 22.—Many more villages are reported to-day as having been devastated by avalanches and the havoc and slaughter are described as appalling. Most of the casualties seem to have occurred in the Province of Cuneo, which is in the south of Piedmont and is bounded by the Martime Alps, many spurs of which intersect the province. At Frassino, which is nineteen miles northwest of the capital city, Cuneo, the number of killed is now stated at one hundred and forty, and forty one corpses have been recovered from the ice and snow in which they were entombed. The village of Orgrana, on the Grana river and near Cuneo, is partly destroyed and many persons have been killed. Twelve houses have been demolished and forty-two persons killed at Deyeis.

The village of Rabasso is almost completely buried under the snow. Scores of people have been killed there, and over two hundred men, women and children are wounded, homeless and in awful distress. More than three thousand men are engaged, in addition to the soldiers, in the work of exhuming the dead and rescuing the survivors in the Province of Cuneo. Troops are also stationed at the entrance of the Valle della Maria and other dangerous valleys, where further avalanches may be expected to occur at any moment, to prevent persons from entering them.

An avalanche has buried a hamlet of fifteen houses at Chiamonte, in Piedmont. The cries of the buried people can be distinctly heard. Two thousand soldiers are endeavoring to rescue them.

Both Men Missing.

Two Peddlers Who Have Disappeared in a Most Mysterious Manner.

PITTSBURG, January 20.—A strange and mysterious case, the sequel of an inexplicable disappearance, is now agitating the minds of people in Allegheny who are acquainted with the particulars, which are of such a nature that leads to the belief that possibly a double murder has been committed and two relatives have met their death at the hands of the same parties. To understand the circumstances of the mysterious affair reference must be made to an occurance which perplexed the authorities at the time.

Up to three months ago John Kelly lived with his wife on Manhattan street, Allegheny. He had been a peddler for years and by hard work had amassed a comfortable sum. His business took him into the country districts in which he had a certain route laid out, over which he went each week with horse and wagon. It was known that he always had his wagon laden with goods and sometimes had considerable sums of money with him as a result of his collections. About three months ago he started out on one of his usual trips and from that time was never seen or heard of, nor could the slightest trace of him be discovered. His movements after leaving his home were shrouded in the deepest mystery and no one could tell in what direction he had gone nor when he had been last seen. Rewards were offered, detectives put on the case and all his old accustomed haunts gone over, but all without avail, and Mrs. Kelly sadly concluded that her husband had been robbed, murdered and his body disposed of in such a way as to baffle discovery. And now comes the startling part of the story. Mrs. Kelly's nephew, Joseph Riehill, has also disappeared as mysteriously as did her husband and no traces of him can be found. Riehill was twenty-three years old and boarded with his aunt. One month ago he got a horse and wagon and took up his uncle's business to dispose of a lot of stock left by him. The young man made one trip over the same ground that his uncle had covered and was so successful that he became infatuated with the business and determined to follow it permanently. He stocked up the wagon afresh, started out about two weeks ago and from that time has disappeared as completely as if the earth had opened and swallowed up man, horse and wagon. Careful search has been made, but it has resulted in nothing but disappointment.

—The Bellefonte Watchman office has procured steam heat to warm its different rooms. As a general thing editors and printers are poor suckers, but brother Meek certainly is an exception to the rule.

—Monday was a freezing cold day for those who had to journey to Bellefonte. And there was a considerable number on the road from Penns and Brushvalleys, all of them getting a taste of the cold wave.

FOR SALE.—Six large mules will be sold at private sale by the undersigned. There are no better mules in the state and will be offered at reasonable prices. Apply to or address C. K. SOBER. Sobers P. O., Pa.

—We notice that our genial townsman, Dr. J. F. Harter is continually busy extracting old and furnishing new teeth. Well Shady always was and always will be a popular dentist and we are glad to see him meet with such success.

FREE FOR LADIES.—Mr. Sperring, the manager of the Millheim Roller Rink, wishes to inform the ladies of Millheim and neighboring towns that they will in the future be admitted free of charge every afternoon and cordially invites them to avail themselves of this opportunity.

—Aaronsburg boasts of a first-class minstrel troupe. It expects to give its first entertainment at Woodward, next Friday evening, and will in the future be advertised as the "Aaronsburg Thespian Troupe." Their performances, we understand, will consist of a medley of comic songs, addresses, &c.

—In another column we publish the professional card of Orvis, Bower & Orvis, of Bellefonte. This is one of the most popular and efficient law firms at the county seat and will attract a large practice. The reputation of the members of the firm as lawyers is such as to gain and keep the confidence of the public.

—We call the attention of our readers to the changed advertisement of the Millheim Marble Works. Mr. A. C. Musser, the proprietor has been connected with the business for the last ten years and is an experienced mechanic. If in need of any tombstones you will do well to call on him at the shops on Main street. His prices are as low as anywhere.

—As the time for the borough and township elections comes nearer it behooves every good citizen to look around for good and conscientous men to fill the offices. Of course none of those offices are paying ones, but it pays the community to be careful and considerate in their selection of candidates. The ward meetings to elect delegates to the local convention will take place on Friday Feb. 6th.

LAST CHANCE.—Peccard Brothers the clothiers, will positively leave Millheim on Tuesday, February 3rd and consequently this is your last chance to buy a suit or overcoat at a sacrifice. They still have an elegant stock of Men's and Boys' Suits and Overcoats on hand which they are bound to dispose of in these few days. Men's suits, complete, from $3.50 up, Boys' suits from $2.50 up; Overcoats proportionally low. Don't forget the place, opposite First National Hotel, Millheim.

—MUST GO. The horrible nauseaus worm-seed compounds called vermifuges and worm syrups, many of them as worthless as they are obnoxious have had their day. It is downright cruelty to compel a child to take them, when McDenald's Celebrated Worm Powders so easy and pleasant to take that children will take them and never know a medicine is being administered, can be procured for the small sum of twenty-five cents. Any case of failure to cause expulsion where worms exist, the money promptly refunded. JOHNSTON, HOLLOWAY & CO., Philadelphia Agents. Sold by J. Eisenhuth, Millheim, Pa.

—If in need of an attractive poster come to the JOURNAL office. Satisfactory work guaranteed.

—There will be preaching in the U. B. church of this place by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Raver, on Sunday morning at 10½ o'clock. Subject, "The Better Country."

—We call the attention of our readers to the new advertisement of Mauck's furniture establishment on Penn street. They will maintain their reputation for selling only the best articles in the market and for as low a price as possible. We would say here that their store is the best place in the county to buy furniture, outside of Bellefonte. Call on them, when in need of anything.

SUPERIOR LEATHER.—During our stay in Bellefonte, beginning of this week, we heard it acknowledged by the largest dealers there that A. J. Harter's leather from Millheim is considered to be the best in the market as to quality and finish. This is certainly a splendid recommendation and will not fail to give our neighbor, Mr. Harter a good trade. Call on him at his shop, on Penn street.

—Last Sunday afternoon Dr. Lee and lady very hospitably entertained two ladies and gentlemen of Millheim, who were paying a visit at the doctor's residence in Madisonburg. Just when the party were ready to return home Mrs. Dr. Lee invited them into the dining room where she had a splendid supper prepared for her guests. Of course the treat was heartily enjoyed by all and Mr. K. especially maintained his reputation in such work. The recipients return their best thanks to the kind hostess.

DEATH OF REV. C. J. DEININGER.—Rev. C. J. Deininger, a well-known Lutheran minister of York, Pa., after a brief illness, died at his residence in said place, aged 63 years, 4 months and 22 days. Rev. Deininger entered the ministry of the Lutheran church in September 1846 and has been an active and faithful laborer in the Master's vineyard up to the time of his death.

He was a son of Rev. A. G. Deininger, brother of A. E Deininger, late of Millheim, deceased, and was born August 30th, 1822, at the "Loop," Centre county, Pa. He was educated at Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, Pa. He was licensed to preach Sept. 25th, 1846 and ordained Sept. 26th, 1846.

—JUST SO. The wise and prudent man now procures a bottle of Dr. Kessler's Celebrated English Cough Medicine and keeps it in the house to be prepared for croup and whooping-cough emergencies. It never fails, it never disappoints. Instructions for treatment of croup and whooping-cough on each wrapper. Nothing like it for colds and all lung troubles. TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.—Whereas, God in his allwise providence has seen fit to remove by death from our school Alfred Barree, one of the lambs of the flock,

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to the divine will of our Heavenly Father.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved and sorrow stricken family and would commend them to the good Shepherd who hath said "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered on the minutes of the school and printed in the county papers and a copy sent to the family.

MR. EDITOR:—The musical convention at Madisonburg, under the supervision of the Reformed, Lutheran and Evangelical congregations jointly, was in every way a grand success. At the organization on Monday evening 56 singers were present, which number increased daily and till Friday evening had reached a total of 97. Many singers from the neighboring towns and valleys were present.

The concert on Friday evening was not very well attended, but the inclemency of the weather undoubtedly prevented many from coming. Rev. Z. A. Yearick, of Aaronsburg, was present on Friday evening and at the close of the concert, by request of Prof. McClintic, made some very appropriate remarks, giving his views on conventions and congratulating the class on the excellent music rendered during the evening. On Saturday evening the hall was crowded with people. The proceeds of the convention amounted to ninety-three dollars, which will be divided among the churches of this place.

As regards the singing we have nothing to say, because self-praise is a poor recommendation, but judging from the applause the audience seemed well pleased.

Penn Hall Shavings.

Frank Fisher is the trickiest boy in town. A regular Hocus Pocus.

J. C. Condo and J. W. Bartges made a flying trip to Bellefonte last week.

The breaking of the head blocks on Sheasley's saw mill delayed their sawing for a few days.

The Spring Millers are suffering with that dreadful disease, scarlet fever.

The entertainment given by the Penn Hall singing class, under the tutorship of Prof. Meyer, assisted by Prof. Lowell Moyer was a grand success. The latter gentleman gave us some of his best comic songs, which were well appreciated.

F. D. Hosterman bought the Heckman farm. It had formerly been bought by Mr. Teats.

Madisonburg News.

Last week our little burg was unusually lively. Quite a number of strangers spent the week with us, attending the convention. Everything passed off decently and orderly.

Mr. Henry Haugh, of Nittany Valley, is busy hauling his farming utensils to Mrs. Zeigler's farm, one mile west of town, where he expects to move this spring.

John Grimm and John W. Hazel will make sale of their personal property in a few weeks and go West.

George Spayd is getting along real well since the operation.

Our townsman, David Ertel, sold his property to R. Royer, of Rebersburg for $325. Mr. Ertel expects to go west in the spring.

The Evangelicals of this place commenced their protracted meeting last Sunday evening.

The old Zeigler property, two miles south of town, was sold to a Mr. Glance, of Sugar Valley, for $300.

STILL.

—PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for February opens with a most bewitching steel-plate, entitled "Dressed for the Charade," representing two children, four years old, attired in fancy costume and singing a duet in keeping. Of all the charming engravings for which "Peterson" has become famous, this is certainly one of the most cunning. Besides this, however, there are some fifty other embellishments, including a very beautiful colored steel fashion-plate, double size, and a costly large-size colored pattern. The literary contents, always superior, are better than ever this month. We would call attention particularly to "In the Ring," "The Pickpocket," and to the two novelets, "The Motherless Girl" and "The Lost Ariadne." Every lady ought to have this magazine. Now is just the time, with the opening year, to subscribe for 1885. The terms are but TWO DOLLARS a year, with great deductions to clubs, and splendid premiums for getting up the clubs. Specimens are sent gratis, if written for in good faith, so as to compare "Peterson" with other magazines at the same price. Address CHAS. J. PETERSON, 306 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

FOR RENT.—That well known store stand at Farmer's Mills with dwelling house, bank barn and about 15 acres of farm land. This is a desirable business location in an excellent farming neighborhood, convenient to churches, schools and railroad. If so desired the store stand will be rented separate from the other property.

The President of the Lousiana Press Association has called a meeting of that organization at New Orleans, Feb. 11, to consider a resolution recently adopted by the Minnesota Editors' Association favoring the organization of a national association, and inviting delegates from the press associations of the various states to meet the delegates from that body in New Orleans February 12.

KILLED BY A SPIDER'S BITE.

NEW YORK, January 22.—About a month ago Charles White, sixteen years old, was bitten in the right arm by a black spider. The arm began to swell, and a physician who was called said the boy was suffering from blood poisoning. The usual remedies were tried but they failed, and the boy died this morning in the greatest agony.

MARRIED.

On the 22nd inst., by Rev. Z. A. Yearick, at the home of the bride, Mr. Harry T. Haines, of Springfield, Missouri, and Miss Laura M. Ettlinger, of Woodward.

DIED.

On the 24th inst., in Gregg township, of scarlet fever, Harry Clayton, youngest son of Mr. & Mrs. Philip Frank, aged 3 years and 10 months.

Truly, parents, Harry is not dead, but has just begun to live in the holier, happier and better land. He has now a happy life free from the cares and trials to which we are all subjected in this world.

He shines in the light of God,
His likeness stamps his brow;
Through the valley of death his feet have trod,
And he reigns in glory now.
He has reached the joy of Heaven,
He is one of the sainted band;
To his head a crown of glory is given,
And a harp is in his hand.
Then why do your tears run down,
Why your hearts so sorely riven,
For another gem in a Saviour's crown,
And another soul in Heaven. L.

A Queen's Opinion.

J. M. Queen writes from Johnston, W. Va., that he has been sorely afflicted for several years, but he was urged to try PERUNA, which he did, and he now feels that he is about over his trouble, and considers it the greatest medicine in the world. He says he has to go or send a distance of fifteen miles to obtain PERUNA, but it will repay him for this.

Ellwood Shallcross, former editor of the Saturday Journal, Wheeling, W. Va., says: "Gentlemen: Some time ago I was afflicted with a pain in my back in the region of the kidneys, and suffered considerably. Having read your advertisement, I went to Logan & Co., of this city, and purchased a bottle of PERUNA, which I took, and it resulted in the complete removal of the pain. I think I can safely recommend it as a superior panacea for pains."

Mr. Aaron Shreffler, Alma, Marion county, Ill., writes: "DR. S. B. HARTMAN & Co., Columbus, O. Dear Sirs: Myself and wife have taken three bottles of your medicines and received much benefit by the use of them. My wife was troubled with neuralgia, headache and weak stomach. Her headache has not troubled her for the last two weeks, and her stomach is much better. She took only PERUNA. I used both medicines, and my general health is so much improved that I feel like a new man. My stomach is very much better, and the MANALIN keeps my bowels all right. We intend to keep taking the medicines until we are permanently cured."

Evans T. Jones, Prospect, Marion Co., O., says: "After having taken medicine from different physicians of this place without any relief, I was induced to try your PERUNA, which I purchased of Cook Bros., druggists, of this place, and after using some six bottles of the same, I feel very much benefited. Am sure it will finally work an entire cure."

T. J. Ewing, Cattletsburg, Ky., writes: "In the early part of last winter I contracted a severe cold, attended with a bad cough; then, being exposed during late flood, added to my disability. I have taken your PERUNA with good results. My cough has entirely left, soreness is gone, and am increasing in flesh.

Thomas Bradford, 314 Western Avenue, Allegheny City, Pa., writes: "I have had liver complaint for three years; I thought I would have to quit work; I have taken two bottles of your PERUNA, and am well."

S. Wolf & Son, Wilmot, Ohio, write: "We handle your goods, and they give good satisfaction."

---FOR CASH---

Believing that the people of Centre county are fully awake to their best interests and that they have the intelligence to comprehend and the courage to recognize the means best calculated to bring about the most desirable results, we would most confidently and earnestly submit the following for your careful consideration:

That king credit has slain its victims by the thousands upon its extended battle fields is a fact beyond successful contradiction, and we would only ask you to call to your recollections your own observations, in proof of this fact, and, the pitiful appeals of those still under the crushing heel of the tyrant fall upon our ears with unmistable certainty and we would say, come, let us rush to their rescue by wielding the sword of justice and striking the monster down with a decisive blow and keeping him there by eternal vigilance. This can be done only by a system which pays as well as demands CASH on delivery.

This system we will adopt and put into operation on the twenty-sixth day of December 1884, after which we will buy and sell positively for cash and produce only and will name such figures on goods as will fully convince every intelligent person that it is to their interest to buy their goods where is radically and permanently established and strictly adhered to. Kindly inviting and soliciting the co-operation of every one in giving this system a thorough trial, we are

KING CREDIT finds no quarter, but where the

ESTEY

Presidential Handwriting.

Abraham Lincoln wrote a small, careful hand.

The handwriting of General Grant is easy to read.

Andrew Johnson's handwriting was large and labored. His figures seemed all thumbs.

Zachary Taylor wrote with a blunt pen, with a few florishes and no attempt at ornamentation.

John Tyler, next to Garfield, was the best writer among the Presidents. He wrote a clear, legible, open hand.

Martin Van Buren did not like to write, but when he did sign his name it was in large, round characters.

Franklin Pierce was the worst writer of all the Presidents. His writing was not pretty, but it could be easily read.

The handwriting of William Henry Harrison was classic. He was a man of varied accomplishments and wide information.

No one would ever be able to counterfeit the handwriting of Rutherford B. Hayes. He never made the same letter the same way.

James Buchanan was proud of his handwriting. He prided himself on his punctuation, spelling and the elegance of his style of composition.

James K. Polk made a signature which looks like copper plate. Every line of it is well made, and there is a flourish under it which would do honor to a writing teacher.

The Enlisted Man.

A strange spirit of comradeship exists among sailors, and instances are common of whole crews being punished by irksome restrictions because they refused to denounce some rogue or rogues who had, in a mood of contempt or petty spite, mutilated gun tackles or the rigging, thrown arms overboard, or been otherwise guilty of some criminal proceeding. To protect the service against the re-admission of such persons only one course is open—the placing of a tiny but indelible mark upon their persons in such a spot as would be noticed only by the examining medical officer. Until this be done there will be no protection in this regard. A worthless character discharged in New York Harbor goes to the receiving ship to enlist. Failing there he tramps to Boston or some other station where men are wanted, and, under the fostering care of some land shark, is properly scrubbed, dressed, and shaved, and being naturally of good physique and possessing the intelligence necessary to make so capable a villain, he passes a satisfactory examination, and is soon borne again upon the books of the Government. If it be known that the cat has been re-established in the navy for extreme cases it is firmly believed that a marked improvement will at once be noticed in the punishment books throughout the service, and also that its use would be extremely rare and never undeserved. It has been remarked that the man-o'-war's man is well fed, and, speaking generally, this is true. The ration is so generous that in each of the small messes into which a crew is divided a certain number of rations are commuted, the canterer of each mess receiving the money in lieu. This, with $1 or $2 apiece monthly, goes to the purchase of bread, ("hard tack" being furnished with the ration,) fruit, etc., when in port, and supplying sea stores when preparing for a cruise. The men, however, frequently complain of the quality of the ration both at sea and in port, and with much reason. By the trickery of dealers and carelessness of some purchasing paymaster much worthless trash is foisted upon the service, and so constant are the requirements for surveying portions of the ration that are unfit for issue that on every man-o'-war a certain number of officers are appointed a board of survey for three months at a time. The price paid for the articles should have insured the quality, and the blame for the useless waste should be placed where it belongs. The sum total of the value of articles of food annually condemned to be thrown overboard would, if made public, be appalling.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant ao the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

Rat Traps at Texas Pacific Figures.

He had a dozen rat traps slung over his shoulder as he promenaded up New street in search of customers, and when asked the price he replied:

"Down—way down. Rat traps have followed Wabash, and you can take your pick for fifty cents."

"But that's too high."

"Well, being Western Union has shrunk you can take one at forty-five."

"Too high."

"Well! Well, I must follow New York Central. We'll say forty."

"Come down."

"Say, mister, do you want a rat trap at Texas Pacific figures?" asked the old man.

"What are they?"

"Why, you take a trap for nothing, and I'll give you a quarter to buy cheese with!"—Wall Street News.

The shortest day of the year is just before pay-day.

Exigency, Not Character.

Clara Belle writes in one of her New York letters: "There is a character in every step a person takes," said a man who thought he knew it all, so far as the science of gait was concerned. "When I saw you pass our house the other day, Miss Clara, I was impressed by the easy, independent freedom of your walk. Such firm yet gentle strides betrayed the dominant unconventionality of your character."

He was a Doctor of Divinity, and I didn't care to sass him, but I felt bound in Christian honesty to ask him: "was I wearing my brown and black plush suit?"

He believed so.

"Then I was making a special effort to take long, swinging steps," I said, "because that's the only way I can make the drapery swith right. That meant exigency, not character. See me in my new dark blue street costume, with its narrow skirt and internal strappings and you'll say I'm a micer from Miceville."

It is not an observation of natural history that a steam whistle makes a horse fly.

A couple were married in Ruthland, Vt., the other day who had been sparking for seventeen years. It takes some women a long time to run a man down.

A Westchester farmer explains that in wet weather his cows absorb more moisture, and, as a consequence, the milk is thinner. The milk can't be much thinner than the story.

An exchange has an article telling people how to go home from church. That is not what the people want. It wants a system that would be effective in getting the people to go to church.

'What is economy?' asks the Philadelphia "North American." We'll tell you. It is paying ten cents for a cigar, and compelling your wife to earn her last season's dress to make it do for another winter. The country is fairly bulging with such economy.

'How like your little girl is to you, Mrs. Brown!' 'How odd that you should think so; she's my husband's child by his first wife!' 'A—a—at all events I don't think I'm wrong in saying that your little boy is the image of Mr. Brown!' 'He's my son by my first husband, Mr. Green!'

A very ragged author was talking in a sanguine way of his dreams and schemes the other day. 'Yes,' said he, 'there to put a piece of mine on the stage at the Francais soon, and another at the Odeon.' 'It would be kinder of them if they'd put a piece on his pants,' murmured a candid friend.

Little Tom—'You are going with us to our picnic, ain't you?'

Young Squibbs—'Yes, my dear child. Your sister honored me with an invitation and I would not miss such an opportunity for the world. By the way, Tom, here is a new silver dollar. Now, I want you to tell me something I want to know. Mr. Gayfellow isn't going, is he?'

Tom—'Oh, yes.'

Squibbs—'Hang him! I thought I would have your sister all to myself today.'

Tom—'But you shouldn't want to hang Mr. Gayfellow. He was the one who told sister to invite you.'

Squibbs—'He? What did he want me for?'

Tom—'To carry the baskets.'

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER,

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA is the old and reliable remedy for impurities of the blood and Scrofulous affections—the King of Blood Purifiers.

Career of this recognized leading Agricultural Journal of the world.

What it is To-Day.

Six months ago the American Agriculturist entered upon a new career of Prosperity and to day it is far superior to any similar periodical ever produced in this or any other country. Richer in editorial strength; richer in engravings; printed on finer paper, and presenting in every issue 100 columns of original reading matter from the ablest writers, and nearly 100 illustrations. Dr. George Thurber, for nearly quarter of a century the editor-in-chief of the American Agriculturist, Joseph Harris, Byron D. Halsted, Col. M. C. Weld, and Andrew S. Fuller, the other long time Editors, together with the other writers who have made the American Agriculturist what it is to day, are still at their post.

DOWNS' ELIXIR.

N. H. DOWNS'

Vegetable Balsamic

ELIXIR

For the cure of

Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and all diseases of the Throat, Chest, and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir is used its efficacy is at once manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—At its commencement it is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflamation, when the cough is rather dry, local fever, and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the cause, consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions, free.

Price 35 cts., 50 cts., and $1.00 per bottle.

Improved Western Washer

PRICE. No. 1 for family of 6..... $8
No. 2 for large family..... 9
No. 3 for Hotel and Laundry, ... 10

Over 20,000 in use.

Thousands of ladies are using it, and they speak of it in the highest terms, saying that they would rather dispense with any other household article, than this excellent Washer. No well-regulated family will be without it, as it saves the clothes, saves labor, saves time, saves fuel, saves soap, and makes washday no longer a dread, but rather a pleasant recreation, as much as such is possible.
